he built up (n^o)
this defense network for the individual observation of each soldier (in and during and beside service) from the point of stand-point of political development - hints, personal behavior etc. In his defense activities exerted in the circle of civilian population he primarily leaned on the functionaries of the party, economic and administrative apparatus. If an a border-violation was committed with impunity in his area he was made responsible and in a more important case he was transferred or even dema-litioned.

Battalia Health Office:

At the Battalia there was no health department, only a health office, who usually a lieutenant with a follower came behind him was stationed there. He maintained the ~~ambulance~~ when he treated the light sick (seriously ill pt. - were sent to the hospital). Through the ~~ambulance~~ department he was directly provided the Battalia and units with drugs and supervised the meals served to the troops from the hygienic point of view. His subordinate at the Battalia was the health NCO at the units the below.

Battalia Supply Co.

The Battalia Supply Co. provided the Battalia and the units with various clothing arms ammunition technical materials, automobiles and animals. He also joined the way to the personnel. His subordinate was the managing the different stores and depots (clothing, arm. ammunition, technical material etc.), the Battalia also kept the books and ~~settled~~ the payments. Similarly he was the immediate superior of the grooms and dog leaders (dog-leader, and professional trainers of the natural-dogs.)
